Press release

MIPIM ready to return in March with former French President François Hollande to give keynote address

MIPIM is ready to return on 15-18 March in Cannes, France

Paris, January 19, 2022 – MIPIM, the world's largest international real estate event, has today reiterated that it is ready to return to its traditional March slot in Cannes.

At the time of writing, MIPIM 2022 is on track to have the same number of exhibitors as the 2019 edition from Europe and the Middle East, as it announces the first of its major speakers from its four-day programme of speeches, panels, awards and in-person networking events.

François Hollande, the French President from 2012-2017, will open MIPIM with a keynote speech that will address the major challenges and opportunities facing the real estate industry and wider society.

An important focus of his speech will be climate change. Having presided over the Paris Climate Agreement at COP 21 in 2015, President Hollande will discuss how real estate must rise to the challenge of delivering MIPIM's theme of 'driving urban change'.

The President will also cover the major societal issues, from health and wellbeing measures after the pandemic to tackling diversity, inequality and employment challenges.

Ronan Vaspart, director of MIPIM, said:

"We are full steam ahead in our planning for what is shaping into a crucial event for real estate in 2022. It is fantastic to see such a strong desire from the industry to come together and the numbers we are seeing signing up for the event are highly encouraging.

"I hope this message gives those already signed up, as well as those still considering their options, the confidence to plan for arriving in Cannes in March. We look forward to welcoming everyone to a safe and secure event that is set to continue MIPIM's tradition of attracting the biggest names in our field, as demonstrated by what promises to be a significant intervention from President Hollande."

The 2022 edition will include a plethora of new international cities and countries looking to showcase their investment opportunities.

In total, more than 90% of European cities & regions who exhibited at MIPIM 2019 have already committed to take stands at the event. These include:
