Dear stakeholders of My Red Light,

This is the third letter in a short time to come from us renters to express our concern about [redacted] being the interim manager and the entire RvT.

We told [redacted] and the supervisory board multiple times that we don't feel safe with [redacted] We told her not to come to the office because we don't feel comfortable and even unsafe with her. Tonight she showed up at the office, to do work she can also do from home. We were shocked about this and we told the beheerder that we feel unsafe and we asked the beheerder to ask [redacted] to leave. [redacted] had to laugh and she said these kind of emotions are normal during reorganisations. She said she was not going to leave earlier, because the supervisory board approved her to be at the office. She even asked which renters were complaining about her. She showed no empathy or integrity at all and ignored our feelings, concerns and complaints. Again. And again we felt unsafe, uncomfortable and insecure.

Even when we try to talk to her about everyday things, she is clueless about what's going on and what the rules are. When we asked her about the rent prices being high and lack of clients on certain days, instead of listening, she suggested lowering the price of our services to attract more clients.
