Dear [redacted]

While [redacted] and I work to sort through details related to your registration, I would like to update you on aspects the two key sessions related to Sharon's (and [redacted] [redacted] and [redacted] work on with the Global Future Council on Mobility. In preparation for your attendance next week, it might be beneficial for us (including [redacted] to connect on Friday, Sunday or Monday. Please let me know your availability and when you will be arriving in New York.

Getting to work: Collaborative solutions for transporting tomorrow's workforce
Monday 23 September, 13:00 - 13:45
Multilateral Room, Convene 730 Third Ave, New York

The GFC on Mobility's Corporate Mobility Transport Challenge has inspired the 'Getting to Work' session at the Sustainable Development Impact Summit. We would like to invite you to speak during this boardroom style discussion to anchoring the conversation on public-private partnerships for mobility. This would be a good opportunity to tease aspects of the City Mobility Charter.

The session will be moderated by We Mean Business' [redacted] (TBC) and bring together 10-15 mobility providers and public officials to discuss the impact of public-private partnerships on mobility service. In addition to you, [redacted] from Bird will speak to Bird's collaboration with municipalities as well as the opportunity Bird provides to transport people (particularly those in underserved locales) in a sustainable manner. [redacted] from LeasePlan will discuss

Global New Mobility Coalition Steering Meeting
Monday 23 September, 16:00 - 18:00
Paris - London, World Economic Forum Office New York

This session marks the official launch of the Forum's Global New Mobility Coalition and also incorporates thought leadership from the GFC on Mobility. Please find a session agenda here. The agenda features a description of the session, agenda and participant list with bios. I located a bio for you and included it here. Please let me know if you would like it updated.

The workshop style session will function in two parts—the first on the vision for a shared, autonomous and electric mobility future and the second on effective policies for implementing this future. You will be invited to provide an update on the City Mobility Charter during the first section. We hope you can speak to the development of the Charter, explain why the City of Amsterdam feels the document is necessary, elaborate on the elements of the Charter and share the practical implications of the Charter (the version unique to Amsterdam). To allow ample time for group discussion, each speaker will be kept to 5 minutes each.

[redacted] from UITP is also a member of the Global Future Council on Mobility and will run an interactive exercise at the end of the first half of the session.

Thank you,

Dear Mr

I am pleased to invite you to join the annual Sustainable Development Impact Summit taking place in New York, USA, on 23 and 24 September.

The Sustainable Development Impact Summit is the World Economic Forum's annual meeting for integrating and leveraging the best examples of public-private cooperation, systems thinking and Fourth Industrial Revolution technologies to advance the Sustainable Development Agenda.

Designed as a platform to showcase and advance the impact of multistakeholder cooperation, the event will bring together 800 business, government, civil society and academic leaders to catalyse action. I encourage you to register as soon as possible given the high interest.

The programme is now available to review and session sign-up is open. In addition, please consult your agenda on TopLink regularly as you may receive invitations to speak or participate in sessions.
